

~Closing Statement~

Many of the ideas that I have put forth have been officially reviewed and recognized in one form or another throughout the past century. There is within society a tremendous need for therapy and improvement in functional development. This is especially true for children. Those children who have dysfunction and disabilities. All too often society and traditionalized organizations/groups are caught up in the idea of treatment, even though what they are doing is a part of enhancement they mainly focus on treating the symptoms and not the cause of the problem. When you see a small child that is unable to move their arms or legs, even to the point of not being able to sit up or hold their head up, our heart generally goes out to them but that is as far as it goes in most cases. In education, we want to teach a child to read, write, and reach for objects. How can a child do this if only minimized therapeutic assessment and minimized working with the child is the means for improvement? Many times and far too often this presents itself in administrative, legal restrictions. This is why education and getting the parent/guardian involved needs to be assessed and addressed so that we can change the laws that put restrictive limitations upon those of us who want to help the most. In most cases, the nervous system is pinched or malfunctioning, the cause of this may vary but the release of tension on the brain is one of the key factors in the development of the mind and body. Once this pressure is released the child will be able to concentrate, breath better, have better blood circulation. At this point therapy can start to work with the symptoms because the cause is being addressed. It is extremely critical that the brainstem is in correct alignment with the surrounding brain tissue as well as being properly place/balance within the cortex vertebrae. If a vertebra is out of place or if the cranial plates are shifted or locked, it adds pressure upon the central nervous system. The direct results are indeed detrimental to the well being of the developing child's mental and physical capabilities.

There will always be those who deny or who are critics of work and this work is no exception. To those who are of such a select population I say this. I have lived my whole life as being a child, and now as a man with a disability. Categorized as being severally orthopedically challenged, unable to walk, unable to talk, been told I lack mental capability. I have been labeled as having Traumatic Birth Injuries, and I am classified as having lack of mobility and paralysis in my legs, being labeled as having cerebral palsy.

I have lived with this and other stereo types all my life and I know for a fact and on a first hand experience that the above work and descriptions of Bilateral Nasal Specific truly does affect the overall development of a person, a child's development. To allow the brain to grow by unlocking the skeletal plates, so the nervous system can operate on a more functional level. I have lived this, I have studied this process and the effects, and causes intently, and who better to explain the process and the causes and development than someone who has been apart of it all their life, from infancy, through childhood, to my teens, and now as a man. To those who fail to believe or comprehend, I challenge you to personally look into what is laid before you, and do a full complete study, as I have, before you conclude and rationalize in your mind what is right and what is wrong. I have lived it, I know it works, I know the downside and the positive outcomes, I know of the political and educational challenges that are faced, and I know of developmental disabilities more so than any outsider influence or study could ever imagine.

I know of the effects and outcomes of this process and I truly believe that it should be common practice in every aspect imaginable. I look forward to sharing my information with anyone who will listen. For I truly believe that it was meant to be, and that it is my destiny to share this easy and hassle free procedure that has so many positive outcomes. To do otherwise is a sin against humanity, and not providing children with a means to have a better chance at life and live fuller lives is an abomination. Likewise, those who are adults who may gain relief or enhanced improvement, if this information is kept from them it is an act of control, suppression, and manipulation, it is then indeed inhuman.

If you, or someone you know of suffers from a disability, hearing impairment, or vision loss please tell them to check into Nasal Balloon Therapy, it has other names as well such as Bilateral Nasal Specific (BNS), Neuro Cranial Restructuring (NCR), and Nasal Cranial Release Technique (NCRT) Please note that results vary from person to person, and it is an improvement over time as the body adjusts and heals. Remember any good thing worth doing takes time, there are no quick fixes and the body does improve over time if given a chance to do so. There have been reported cases that people/children right after receiving treatment could hear, speak, awaken from comas, and have greater mobility.

The nasal adjustment is quick, relatively painless; it feels more like a release of pressure, and it is effective. It is performed by doctors of chiropractic, naturopathic doctors, doctors of medicine, and a handful of dentists who use it as an alternative to straighten teeth in many locations. An empowered mind is an informed mind, please by all means find out what you can and make your educated response from this conclusion.
